Please join Minnesota’s public health community in these thought-provoking breakfast conversations:

October 24, 2014... where we work

Panelists and forum participants will explore the intersection of zip code and work. How does zip code affect transportation, the location of industries and job opportunities, and occupation health?

January 23, 2015... where we play

From topics related to green space, recreational opportunities and community planning, our forum panelists and participants will focus their discussion on how zip code affects our opportunities for play.

March 13, 2015... where we learn

At this third forum panelists and participants will explore and discuss issues related to zip code and our schools.

May 8, 2015... where we eat

The last forum will explore zip code and our food access. What progress have we made in addressing food deserts, providing access to fresh produce through local community farmer’s markets, and addressing farm worker health concerns?
